

Women in War and Peace

Steps have been taken to secure a better representation of women in the armed forces, military stereotypes have been challenged and a broader discussion of diversity in the armed forces has followed. At the same time, the UN has put focus on women in peacebuilding and the positive role that female peacekeepers and peacebuilders can play in securing sustainable and inclusive peace processes.

But how far has the development towards a broader inclusion of female soldiers come and what is next? How do we address gender awareness in war and peace, and are the challenges similar?

Centre for Military Studies has the great pleasure of hosting a panel discussion that will address these questions and more.

Time: 19 September 2017, from 15:30-17:00
Venue: CSS, Øster Farimagsgade 5, room 35.3.12 (entrance from Gammeltoftsgade)

Speakers

Megan MacKenzie, Associate Professor, University of Sydney

Gary Schaub, Senior Researcher, Centre for Military Studies

Rikke Haugegaard, Associate Professor, Royal Danish Defence College

Moderator

Katja Lindskov Jacobsen, Senior Researcher, Centre for Military Studies